

Have Ideas for Neighborhood Park and Street Improvements? Propose a Project Today!

What is the Neighborhood Park and Street Fund (NPSF)?

These funds are a portion of Seattle's city budget - approximately $1.2 million in 2014 that are set aside for neighborhood improvements to streets and parks. NPSF projects are proposed by the community.

What projects are eligible?

The NPSF can be used for projects valued up to $90,000 to fund park or street improvements.

Examples of park projects include: playground improvements, trail upgrades, tennis or basketball court resurfacing, park benches or tables, natural area renovations, and accessibility improvements.

Examples of street projects include: crossing improvements such as marked crosswalks, curb ramps, and pedestrian countdown signals; and traffic calming, such as traffic circles, median islands, and speed feedback signs. This funding source may be used for sidewalk repair and, rarely, for short segments of sidewalk construction (less than 100 feet, or one third of a block). New sidewalks are typically more expensive than this funding allows.

For traffic calming projects, you must participate in the Seattle Department of Transportation's traffic calming program prior to applying for your project to ensure that the project is beneficial, feasible and that there is sufficient community support. Information about the program is available on line at:

Who decides which projects will be funded?

The NPSF is a competitive process and not all projects will be funded. Each Neighborhood District Council will review applications and select three projects to forward to the Seattle Department of Transportation (SDOT) and Seattle Parks and Recreation (Parks) for feasibility and cost analysis. Funding decisions are based on recommendations from District Councils, Parks and SDOT, with the final decisions made by the Mayor and confirmed by the City Council. How are proposals evaluated?

District Councils will consider the following criteria:

- ☐ Significant Impact: The project will have a widespread positive impact on the neighborhood as a whole.
- ☐ Broad Support: The project has the support of multiple neighborhood or community groups.
- ☐ Leveraging Opportunities: The project also qualifies for funding from another City source, and therefore leaves more NPSF money available for other projects.
- ☐ Equity: Funding is to be equitably shared among the districts over time. Neighborhoods that are already receiving significant public investment from other sources may be also given lower priority.
